The expansion of the production line involves an investment volume of around EUR 2.8 million. That underlines the importance of the Premnitz site for the Blücher Group yet again.

“We will be penetrating new markets in the military, police and fire service area, but above all also in industry. The system’s newly developed coating and gluing technology will help us improve the unique quality of our filter systems still further,” explains the company’s founder Hasso von Blücher

The compounds produced on the line are used among other things in the manufacture of protective clothing or textile filters. The adsorbents reliably bind pollutants from air and water.

The core business of the Blücher Group is development and production of highly efficient filter technologies based upon high-performance spherical adsorbents, which in their function resemble active carbon.

From over 40 years of company tradition in the field of adsorbent compounds, SmarTex GmbH in Premnitz is evolving as a subsidiary of the Blücher Group into a state-of-the-art operation for the manufacture of functional compounds.
